STATE WON'T RAISE UTILITY RATES TO HELP COMPETITOR

Lancaster Telephone Co. Says It Can't Give Service at Competitor's Price

Madison — The Wisconsin railroad commission will not force a utility to charge higher rates on the plea of a competitor that its low rates are forcing it to compete on a losing basis, the commission announced Monday in ruling on a telephone war at Lancaster.

The question was an entirely new one in Wisconsin. The Farmers Telephone company at Lancaster has the largest number of subscribers, while the Wisconsin Telephone company operates in the same territory. The Farmers company pointed out to the commission that the Wisconsin company is selling service at one dollar a month, claiming that this was unfair competition, and asked the commission to set a minimum rate for both companies at a figure that would force both to operate at a profit. The commission found that the Wisconsin company is operating at a loss.

CAN'T FORCE HIGHER RATE

The commission ruled that it could not force any company to collect a higher rate, and that while it had authority to permit the charging of a higher rate, it cannot order that a company must charge its clients more.

Negotiations have been on for some time for one company to buy the other, but these have practically ended, with a promise that the rate war will be fought to a finish.

"In administering the public utility act this commission has construed the law to mean that a utility may reduce its rates without the formality of a hearing by merely filing the new schedule with the commission, subject, of course, to the power of the commission to act should there be a discriminatory or other objectionable feature in the proposed schedule," the commission held.

LOSS IS UP TO COMPANY

"It has been assumed that the utility management is competent to determine whether a lower rate is consistent with the financial status of the company, and even though a utility has placed in effect rates which are less than the actual cost of the service rendered, the commission has not seen fit to interfere unless the successful operation of the utility were threatened, or unless unjust discrimination were created thereby.

"In other words, the commission has refrained from taking action which would deprive the public of the benefits of a low service rate if the company is willing to provide service on that basis.

"In the present case there can be no reasonable question of the ability of the Wisconsin Telephone company to continue to furnish telephone service in Lancaster even at a loss; and such loss would, under proper accounting practice, be taken from the amount available for return and would not be charged to the cost of operation of any other property of the company. The commission has no information to indicate that the losses sustained at Lancaster have not been taken care of properly in this manner."

2 CARS DAMAGED WHEN ONE STOPS SUDDENLY

Two cars were slightly damaged in a collision on S. Cherry-st about 50 feet from the intersection of W. College-ave at 1:15 Monday afternoon. Miss Myrtle Ohde, 715 N. Durkee-st, was driving her car west on College-ave and turned to go south on S. Cherry-st. Directly behind her was a Minnesota car owned and driven by E. T. Roe, 1023 N. Green-ave, Minneapolis. Miss Ohde's machine suddenly stopped and Roe's machine crashed into it. The rear end of the Ohde car and the front of the Minnesota machine were slightly damaged. No one was injured.

How To Play Bridge

By Milton C. Work

The pointer for today is: TO DOUBLE A NO TRUMP SHOWS FIVE HIGH CARDS APT TO TAKE TRICKS, BUT WITH SOME HOLDINGS OF THAT STRENGTH A PASS IS WISER.

This week we are considering twenty West hands. South (Dealer) having bid one No Trump, what should West declare? Today's hands are: by the double in this case? The probability is that it would produce a bid from East which would fall short of game and no bid which East could make would give West greater justification for bidding two No Trumps than he already has. As South has big an Aceless No Trump and must

The hand has the five-high-card strength requisite for an informative double because Ace-Jack-X may properly be counted as two high cards; but what is to be gained consequently be quite strong, there is little chance that West can make two No Trumps, and still less than he can make three. With South the No Declarer, West is sure of 100 in honors and practically sure to save game.

No. 2 Double. At first glance the hand seems a bit weak; but with two Major Aces, two Major Tens, four cards in each Major suit and Ace-King in one Minor, the hand has all the high-card strength that is required. The probability of game, if partner name either Major, makes the double attractive.

No. 3. Pass. The hand has the high-card qualifications but is short and weak in both Majors. A double probably would bring a Major answer which would not produce game. A

It's only six steps from the FARM to the CITY. But sometimes the way is hard. It depends on your vocabulary.

THE RULES

- 1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW TO HEN, in three strokes. COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
  - 2—You can change only one letter at a time.
  - 3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
  - 4—The order of letters cannot be changed.
- The solution is printed on page 16.

Spade answer from partner would have to stand and a Heart answer would have to be taken out with two No Trumps; neither promises a satisfactory outcome.

No. 4. Double. The high-card strength is exactly the same as in No. 3, but in No. 4 it is concentrated in the Majors. There is a reasonable chance of game if partner have a four-card Major and this makes the double a chance worth taking.

The four hands to be considered tomorrow are:

CLUB DEACON PLEADS FOR MORE SACRIFICE

Dr. Holmes Asks Lions Club to Follow Example of Jesus, in Planning Fall Program

A plea for more of the spirit, love and sacrifice of Jesus of Nazareth in the work of the Lions club as a whole and by each member was the substance of the address of Dr. J. A. Holmes, deacon of the club, at the regular weekly luncheon Monday at the Conway hotel. The address was preparatory to completion of the fall program of the club.

Quoting from Ruskin, Dr. Holmes said that he believed as Ruskin has written, that we manufacture everything except men and that making of men should be the supreme aim of mankind today. The world is sorely in need of faithful, clean, honest men, the speaker said.

Too many people count the cost of every thing in life today and little consider what they are giving to the world, Dr. Holmes said. Character should consist in great part of purpose and objective so that every day one would accomplish something that would enrich the life of some other person.

Dr. Holmes said that he believed the teachings of Jesus as a plain, ordinary friend of humanity were the highest and best that God had ever given the world. Dr. Holmes asked that the members of the club carry out into life the spirit love and sacrifice in the mind of Jesus and that they bear them in mind as they made plans for their new years work.

Such Flavor

as this comes only in real Quaker Oats

THE price you pay for substitutes is the same as for the genuine Quaker Oats. The difference is in the flavor. And flavor, above all things, is important in oats.

That rich and tasty Quaker flavor is the result of some 50 years' milling experience. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats.

That is why millions demand the Quaker brand—why you should accept no other.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates, and vitamins and "bulk" are thus combined to make Quaker Oats an excellently "balanced" food.

Kellogg Battery-less Radio Is Here!

Never before have we seen such enthusiasm over a new radio product. But even so, the people of this city are just beginning to realize that Battery-less Radio has actually become a fact. Our visitors frequently remark, "Do you really mean that there are no batteries at all? Is there nothing we have to keep supplied with water?"

That is exactly what we do mean when we offer you "Battery-less Radio." Kellogg prepared the way more than two years ago by perfecting an entirely new kind of radio tube to operate on alternating current—the kind of electricity you use to light your home. Any light socket in your home furnishes the power for this astonishing radio. Come in and see for yourself.

A Power Direct from Socket to Tube (A.C.)

No "A" Batteries

No "B" Batteries

No "C" Batteries

NONE!

The cabinets of the various Kellogg models are as outstanding as this "Batteryless" feature. Just the simple dignity that comes of authoritative design, perfectly matched woods, finished by an artist. The Kellogg line offers a wide range for choice, but all sets are of one quality—the very best. For thirty years Kellogg has been building telephones that way. Now they have assumed leadership in radio just as they have always held leadership in the independent telephone field.

Come in! See—hear—and enjoy it!

You will find a warm welcome whether you come to buy or simply to post yourself on this great new radio development. We want everybody to know about this great set. So, come in and allow us to demonstrate it. There's a welcome for everyone.

Other Kellogg Models $75 and Up

For those who do not have alternating current—and those who demand the highest quality of radio reception at a minimum price, we offer Kellogg 5 and 6 tube, Inductively Tuned, D. C. Radio Sets from $75 up.

In considering the lower priced Kellogg sets, please remember that all Kellogg Radios are built to the same standard of quality. Unequalled tone, rare selectivity, simplicity of tuning and powerful range are built into every Kellogg set, regardless of price. These D. C. sets may be operated either with batteries or direct from the light socket through the use of Power Units.

America's Constitution

No. 8

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this, the eighth of a series of twelve articles, Mr. Atwood reveals the federal strength our Constitution carries. Tomorrow: The Form of Government the Constitution Provided.

BY HARRY ATWOOD
President, Constitution Anniversary Association

The Constitution contains a number of unusual features which at the time of its adoption were new in government.

First, the Constitution provided for a permanent union of states under a federal government with provision for additional states to enter from time to time, but with no provision for lawful exit therefrom.

In other words, it changed the condition from a loose confederation of states into a union of states which could not withdraw from the union without destroying the plan of the Constitution.

This fact accounts for its being the first successful federal government.

There has been much loose and theoretical discussion on this question, but nowhere in the original Constitution is there any provision to justify a state in an attempt to withdraw from the union.

BALANCING NATION AND STATE
Another novel feature of the Constitution was that it set up a dual government, well balanced between the nation and the states, operating directly upon the people as individuals as well as upon the states.

The dual form of government resulted in a dual citizenship. A person may be a citizen of the United States and a citizen of a state. A citizen of the United States might not be a citizen temporarily of any state. That is, a citizen might move from one state to another state and not have resided in that state long enough to have qualified for citizenship there. In such event the status would be that of an inhabitant; but a citizen of a state is automatically a citizen of the United States.

The authors of the Constitution made a very clear distinction between what are properly constitutional provisions and what are properly statutory enactments and studiously excluded statutory material which was a novel feature in Constitution making.

NO SALARY NAMED
The Constitution did not specify the amount of salary for any public official. Its authors well knew that what might be a princely salary in 1787 might be insufficient compensation with the lapse of time, and they left all such matters to be determined and regulated by statute law.

The Constitution does not provide definitely the number of members that should constitute the legislative department; nor does it stipulate how many justices should sit on the supreme bench nor how many federal courts there should be; nor does it provide how many officers should be appointed by the president or what offices should be created. All such questions were left to be governed by statute as population increased, as conditions changed, and as new problems arose.

For example, all that is said in the Constitution with regard to the postal service is "to establish postoffices and postroads." Those five words are sufficient as a constitutional provision for the postal system. The questions of where postoffices should be located, how much they should cost, who should be employed in the postal service, what pay they should receive, whether mail should be carried on dirt roads, railroads, waterways, or air routes, are all matters to be governed by statute so as to conform to change and development.

SHOWS DISCRIMINATION
The Constitution contains many provisions indicating line discrimination in the insertion of what are properly constitutional provisions and the omission of what should be properly statutory enactments.

An essential characteristic is that a constitutional provision should be permanent in its nature, while a statutory provision may be temporary and changeable.

Without going into the question of merits of the principle of prohibition as such, it is quite evident that the language of Amendment XVIII is statutory material and this fact doubtless accounts for some of the difficulties it has incurred.

If it was necessary for the federal Constitution to deal with this highly important problem, it would seem that a more effective and proper amendment would be "Congress shall have power to define and regulate the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors."

In our state constitutions there is too little discrimination between what are properly constitutional provisions and what are properly statutory enactments, which has resulted in writ-

CECIL REPLACED MY LORD ONSLOW, NOTED POLITICIAN

LORD ONSLOW

Geneva, Switzerland—(AP)—Lord Onslow, the British under-secretary for war, who has taken Lord Cecil's place at the assembly of the league of nations, is a man of considerable diplomatic and political experience.

He is blessed with a cheerful disposition, and his motto, "Festina lente," is a punning interpretation of the patronomic, and the English version into their constitutions much material that should properly be statutory enactments; and this is also true of the constitutions of other countries.

slon, "Forward, with caution," has been frequently exemplified in the course of his career. His sister, Lady Irwin, is the wife of the Viceroy of India.

Lady Onslow is a lover of the English countryside and manages a model dairy farm at her beautiful country home in Surrey. She is particularly keen on pig farming, and organized a loan scheme which enables the tenants of her husband's estate to keep pigs for home consumption.

SPORTS NEWS OF NEENAH AND MENASHA SOCIETY

ZONING ORDINANCE AMENDED TO ALLOW FACTORY DISTRICT

Residence Zone West of Commercial - st Hereafter May Be Used by Factories

Neenah—An ordinance amending an ordinance so that industrial districts could be opened in the first and second wards on property along the Chicago and Northwestern railway right of way west of St. Commercial-st. which has heretofore been designated as residential districts, was unanimously passed Monday night at a meeting of the common council.

Objections were to have been registered at this meeting against such a change in the zoning districts and to construction of a condenser just south of the railway tracks on S. Commercial-st.

Anton Nielsen objected on the grounds that construction of a building at that point would shut off the view of the tracks and might cause a bad accident. He suggested that the place be converted into a park for children.

C. C. Steffanson, Henry Rasmussen, D. Logger and P. Jensen objected on the grounds of an inadequate sewer system, which they claimed would be flooded by waste water and sewage from such a condenser. Engineer Nielsen explained that in the near future the sewer system there would be rearranged to take care of all water and sewage.

New streets to be planned and extensions made on present streets in a proposed plan in the Fourth ward as recommended by the planning commission were authorized.

DELAY STREET ACTION

The opening of "Street" from Lake Winnebago to Lake Butte des Morises was discussed and action was delayed pending further investigation. The project was suggested as a result of a joint meeting of street committees of Neenah and Menasha councils for purpose of opening up the street for better traffic regulations. Should the street be opened it will connect by way of Abby-ave, which will have to be extended across the Chicago and North Western railroad right of way. Both city committees reported in favor of the plan. This also brought out the change in switching places of the North Western line, which at the present time blocks traffic on street crossing.

The bid of A. H. Anzelmeyer of Neenah, $2,600, for furnishing new heating plant was accepted upon recommendation of the committee on parks and public buildings, which had considered the bids.

WILL OPEN STREET

A standard width side walk was ordered placed within the next 20 days on Elm-st. between Washington-ave and Division-st. The city purchased the Kluge property to be extended to street to the south city limits. Property on Winnebago-ave south of Harrison-st. where a public dumping ground has been started, is to be condemned and the practice stopped by order of the police and city attorney, who have declared it a nuisance.

A light was ordered placed on Edna-ave at a corner of Railway and W. Water-sts and a catch basin ordered placed at the corner of Van and Coroline-sts.

Mayor Denhardt, prompted in the council room during the meeting by a local newspaper reporter, stated that he had been misquoted in the Appleton Post-Crescent by saying he was in favor of purchasing the Held airport. He said the city could not purchase such a property and would not ever go into the airplane business. The article alluded to, did not quote the mayor as saying the city was to purchase the site. It stated that the city had a chance, should it so desire, to purchase the air port which had been offered it by Mr. Held. "According to a statement made by Mayor J. H. Denhardt."

Bills amounting to $11,275.00 were ordered paid.

KIWANIS CLUB CHAPTER ORGANIZED AT CHILTON

School children desiring to attend the fair will be given permission to do so providing they have a written excuse from the parents to the superintendent who will issue the permit upon the day upon which the pupil wishes to attend.

KIMBERLY VOCATIONAL SCHOOL TO OPEN OCT. 3

Neenah—Vocational training classes will be opened Oct. 3. It is a new high school for the rural region. Classes will be conducted in paper making, commercial work, shop work, drafting, sewing, agriculture and English. Applications for admission will be given to Carl Christensen, who will have charge of the work this year.

DAIRYMEN GET STATE, U. S. AID IN CHECKING JOHNE'S DISEASE

DEATH OF ANIMAL IS CERTAIN ONCE DISEASE GETS START

Affected Cows Lose Flesh Very Slowly—Ailment Doesn't Affect Humans

Madison—(P)—Dairymen in Wisconsin who have cattle suffering from John's disease may rid their herds of such cattle, and receive indemnity for them from funds provided by the state and federal governments, according to Dr. B. Beach, veterinarian at the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin.

"John's disease," says Dr. Beach, is a slow progressing chronic disease, known among farmers as chronic bacterial dysentery. The germ that causes it belongs to the same family as the tuberculosis germ, but is different.

It is believed that once John's disease is under way in a cow, death is sure to result. The affected animals lose flesh very slowly until they become virtually walking skeletons. It has no significance as affecting human health, insofar as is known, Dr. Beach points out, because it has never been found in the human body, but cows afflicted with it may cause serious damage to the herd.

ISOLATED IN 1910

"The cause of the disease was first isolated in 1910 by two English investigators," says Dr. Beach, "and in 1915 the organism was isolated for the first time in this country at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. Since that time we have tested probably 1500 cattle with the diagnostic agent known as John's, which is similar to tuberculosis in its action, and use."

"Recently sanitary authorities have recognized John's disease as a danger to the entire cattle industry. The United States Department of Agriculture has agreed to pay indemnity to those states whose legislature matched the federal appropriation with a state appropriation of the same amount. Wisconsin is one of the first states to take advantage of this offer."

Wisconsin farmers can get indemnity for cattle reacting because of John's disease the same as for those reacting because of tuberculosis. He will receive payment of one-half the difference between the appraisal value of his cows and the net salvage, or what he may receive from the packing plant. The indemnity, however, is not to exceed $40 in the case of grade stock, and not more than $90 in the case of pure-bred cattle. Herds may be tested for the disease either by local or state veterinarians. John's disease, says Dr. Beach, does not affect the value of cattle for use by the packing industry, but the isolated condition which it produces will, of course, make them worth less even for that use.

DISCUSS ELECTRICITY AT FARM INSTITUTES

Madison—(P)—Farmers' Institutes will be held this fall in 15 counties and 43 towns, according to a schedule made public by E. I. Luther, superintendent of Farmers' Institutes.

The schedule of institutes follows:

Nov. 8-9, Washington Island; Nov. 10-11, Clay Bank; Nov. 29-30, Wilton; Nov. 30, Phoenix, Westfield, Soldiers Grove, Clapham, and Strum; Dec. 1-2, Tomah, Glenwood City, Polk, Montello, Gays Mills, Elk Mound and Galesville; Dec. 6-7, Ellisville, Wayside, Deerbrook, Shawano, Roshold, Fall Creek, and Blair; Dec. 8-9, Casco, New Franken, Antigo, Bonduel, Junction City, Augusta and Pigeon; Dec. 13-14, Tonet, De Pere, Kendall, Tigerton, Embarras, Waunakea, Somers; Dec. 15-16, Port Koshong, Pulaski, Norwalk, Leopold, Clintonville, and Eastman.

At the meetings held this fall, as well as at those scheduled during the winter and spring, the business and economic side of farming will be discussed.

Last year approximately 450 meetings were held during the 12-month period, with an estimated attendance of 100,000 farmers. Among last year's meetings were 13 co-operative marketing institutes, lasting three days, on butter, American cheese, foreign cheese, tobacco, poultry and eggs. Forty-four cheese factory meetings were held, twenty-five creamery meetings, ninety-eight on poultry, and three on sheep.

Electrification of farms will also be discussed at this fall's institutes.

75-YEAR-OLD DWELLING IS BEING REMODELED

Albert Hafferbecker, Freedom, has started remodeling the old Johnson residence which has stood for about 75 years on the road, about one mile north of Talmage corners. The Johnson farm was taken up as a homestead in the early days of Wisconsin as a state.

Short Course Students To Make Poultry Study

Madison—(P)—Students enrolled in the 15 weeks short course offered by the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin have an opportunity to study problems in poultry production.

The first five weeks of the course are devoted to the study of breeds and varieties of poultry, and the second five-weeks period to the problem of production and marketing poultry and eggs. Incubation and brooding are studied in the third period.

The poultry flock is now recognized as an important source of income on many Wisconsin farms, say experts at the College, whereas a few years ago the average poultry flock was considered only a small side line. Today the egg and poultry money is a comparatively large item on many farms.

Door-Co Farmers Harvest Record Crop Of Apples

BY W. F. WINSEY
Special Farm Writer

Sturgeon Bay—The Door-co apple crop this season is the biggest and one of the best crops ever raised in the county, according to H. W. Ullrich, secretary of the Door County Fruit Growers union. Beside a large number of farm orchards, 1,600 acres in regular orchards are producing the big crop of this year. The largest preceding crop consisting of 102,000 bushels was grown in 1925. The crop this year exceeds the crop of 1925.

The Door-co crop consisting of nine carloads has already been harvested, packed and shipped. Six cars of Dulleys have also been shipped and five cars more of the same variety will soon follow. Seventy-five carloads of Wealthies and ten carloads of Wolf River apples will be harvested and shipped after the Dulleys are gone. Other varieties in the order of their ripening are, Snow apples, 20 cars, McIntosh, 35 cars, Northwest Greenings, 75 cars. After those will come the later, winter varieties, such as the Talmage Sweet, and miscellaneous, 25 cars.

Shipments are being made to Milwaukee, Chicago, Duluth, northern Wisconsin points, to the Dakotas and to eastern cities. The apples are packed in boxes, according to the western style, and shipped under the Sturgeon Bay brand.

Two girls experienced in packing apples are to arrive in Sturgeon Bay this week to lead in the packing of the McIntosh apples in boxes for the New York and other eastern markets. Each of these girls pack 150 boxes daily, containing 150 apples each. Each apple in a box has to be handled and wrapped individually.

New York pays a much higher price for the McIntosh apples than does other markets and prefers apples packed in boxes.

PRODUCE PRICES SHOW SMALL GAIN

Condition of Livestock Better, Cheese and Butter Is Satisfactory

Madison—(P)—While livestock prices, advanced, cheese and butter prices were only "in satisfactory condition," says the weekly review of the state department of markets.

The review shows butter markets fairly satisfactory, cheese trading "only fair on all styles and advances in prices in hogs, cattle and sheep. It says:

"Several fractional price advances took place in butter. In many quarters goods were held for premiums which were often obtainable. At the close trade was fairly active and markets continued in firm position. Supplies of top grades were, closely cleaned up. Centralized car market trading was slow. Butter prices are about 1 1/2 higher than last year at this time.

"Cheese buyers were operating conservatively, confining their purchases to immediate needs. The Chicago office of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports that the recent rains have had a good influence on vegetation. The growing crops in Wisconsin have been greatly benefited. Pastures have improved. Summer feeding continues, due to the shortage of pasture and the fairly high price level of cheese. This will reduce the quantity of farm grown feed available for winter feeding. Weekly production is now very near the corresponding periods of last year, with little chance of an increase unless the fall pastures should be better than usual. Cheese prices are about 3 cents higher than last year at this time.

HOG PRICES GAIN

"Hog prices gained considerably during the week as a result principally of smaller receipts. Better grade hogs gained 50 to 65 cents. The pig market advanced 15 to 35 cents. At the close, however, the values reacted somewhat, as a result of a slackening in eastern shipping demand, due to the intense heat. It is reported that there is no expectation of market improvement in prices because the present live values are relatively high with relation to the dressed market. Hog prices are about 28 cents lower than last year at this time.

"As the result of a constantly decreasing supply of fed steers cattle values went up during the past week. The increase ranging from 25 to 50 cents. Prices at this time than last year.

"Limited offerings were responsible for considerable price advances. Native lambs gained 50 to 75 cents, westerners, 75c to $1.00 and aged sheep 25 cents. Sheep prices are about $1.10 lower than last year at this time."

FARM ACTIVITIES ABOUT LEEMAN AND VICINITY

Special to Post-Crescent

Leeman—Laurel Strong has purchased a silo filler and a tractor. Fred Keigel has acquired a silo filler.

Joel Poole has been hauling milk on the Brightman factory milk route the past few days.

Abraham Guyette raised his silo last week.

Lester Boman bought a new gas engine.

M. G. Colson is having a well drilled on his farm.

Lester Boman is having a wall put under part of his house this week.

The government now is determined to bring about a stronger bond of co-operation among the vegetable growers of the country. It is especially in the east that such co-operation is most needed, says A. W. McKay of the Department of Agriculture, because of the increasing competition.

Here And There Among The Farmers--

BY W. F. WINSEY
Special Farm Writer

Harvey Gorges, route 2, New London, has finished seven acres of his twenty-five acres of fall plowing. In another week his corn will be fully matured and ready to cut. As his crop is unusually good for this season, he expects to cure a considerable quantity of it for seed. His late potatoes are picking up since the rains and are looking good.

A. G. Gorges, route 2, New London, had bad luck with his corn due to grubs at first and a hail storm later. About a third of his corn field was destroyed in these ways. The corn in the balance of the field is very thrifty. The grubs also injured his early potatoes, but his late potatoes are doing well.

Fred Gorges, route 2, New London, is renovating his stables and giving his steel pens and stanchions a coat of paint. He has a seven acre field of corn that is looking good. Leafhoppers have almost destroyed his field of late potatoes. His cucumbers were injured by the dry weather and by beetles, but the vines revived after the rains.

Although many farmers are filling their silos, corn grew by leaps and bounds as a result of the rains and hot corn weather. Cabbage is not keeping pace with corn as it needs cooler weather than does corn.

Extensive repairs are being done on a number of farms near Appleton. Henry Behnke, route 2, is building a new porch on his residence. John Griesbach, route 2, has started a new house. The residence being built by Carl Ebert, route 2, is practically completed.

Otto Witthys, route 2, has been working on a milk house and Robert Rohm, route 4, has been doing considerable repair work on his barn.

Threshing was completed last week on the Albert Kaufman farm near Dale, which consists of 170 acres, two thousand bushels of oats, five hundred bushels of barley and two hundred of wheat, a total of 2,700 bushels. This has been the best yield for several years, also the largest job threshed so far in this part of the county. The hum of the ensilage cutter will be heard the coming week and some farmers are already filling. There will be plenty of ripe corn, although the ears are smaller. Fred Rapaghor has purchased a new silo filler which was made by an Appleton concern.

Matt Lodel, Denmark, has lately completed the building of a modern slaughter house, 16 by 36 feet on the farm of Frank Nelson, route 2.

Ralph Erickson, route 4, Denmark, started filling his silo Friday. Although his corn is not fully ripened, it will yield as well as did his crop of last year. His ears and barley yielded well and he had a big crop of hay. After filling his silo, Mr. Erickson will start fall plowing. His pasture has picked up since the rains and is now supplying feed for his cows. Crops in his locality, on the whole, are as good as last year, said Mr. Erickson.

William Jorgenson, route 3, De Pere, reports all crops very fair in his vicinity. 12 more rain had fallen during the growing season, the yields would have been excellent. The corn crop, on the average, is as good as it was last year. Barley was very good but late oats could have been better. Cutting corn during the present growing season, is a mistake according to Mr. Jorgenson as the growers are not setting, as many ripened ears as they might.

Joseph Maternowski, route 3, De Pere, started filling his silo Friday morning. His corn grew rapidly as a result of the hot days and nights, but Mr. Maternowski, fearing a repetition of the early frost and deep mud of last fall, decided to take no chances.

Edward Sewall, route 1, Dale, started filling his silo Tuesday. He has 25 acres of corn that will make fairly good silage but the corn is not as heavy as last year. His late potatoes are being damaged by leaf hoppers that kill the leaves and turn them red. Potato experts of the college of agriculture say that leaf hoppers have caused serious damage to Wisconsin potato fields in recent seasons. They are light green in color and obtain their food by sucking the juices from the veins of the leaves. The mature hoppers puncture the veins and insert their eggs. The young insects remain on the leaves where they were hatched until they are mature, but the full grown ones are very lively and fly or hop from plant to plant. Injured leaves are charred.

CABBAGE WORMS DO BIG DAMAGE, AMUNDSON SAYS

Cabbage worms have been and are doing a great deal of damage to the cabbage crop in Outagamie county, according to Robert Amundson, Outagamie county farm agent.

Amundson suggests the following spray to check the activities of the worms. Use one pound of Paris green to 50 gallons of water or four pounds of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water.

MAKERS OF COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER OBEY LAW

Madison—(P)—Manufacturers of commercial fertilizers throughout the state are in general complying very well with their general guaranteed analysis, is the decision of the feed and fertilizer inspection division of the state board of agriculture, which has nearly completed examination of samples collected during the spring and summer. These samples were drawn from fertilizer dealers' stock in all parts of the state. In a very few cases, slight differences of either nitrogen, phosphoric acid, or potash were found, but such cases were rare.

The cost of inspection is met by the fees which manufacturers pay in registering their various brands. It is estimated that 20,000 tons of fertilizer were sold in the state this year. There were 119 brands of fertilizers registered.

A rising tendency of wool prices at present indicates a favorable outlook for producers of winter lambs this year. With an increase in the crop of native lambs and the decrease of lamb feeding in the corn belt and increased feeding in the west, price of slaughter lambs are expected to be lower, while winter prices are likely to take a jump.

Sturgeon Bay—Fifteen hundred persons attended the junior county fair on the local fair grounds on Saturday and inspected the best products of the boys and girls of Door-co, as members of 4-H clubs, pupils of rural and village schools, and pupils of the Smith-Hughes departments of high schools. It was the first county-wide fair of the kind ever held in the state, and was a decided success in every particular. It was made possible by the co-operation of the public schools of Door-co, the county agent, the pupils of schools, school officers, parents, and the civic societies of Sturgeon Bay.

As the first step in the preparation for the display of the work of the children of Door-co, B. F. Rusy, agricultural agent, and William J. Gilson, superintendent of schools, joined hands early last spring and organized the boys and girls of county into 22 4-H clubs, 410 members using the school district as a unit. They appointed local leaders, traveled about the county at night together to hold club meetings and in the day time to inspect the work of club members and to make suggestions for improvement. Among the projects selected by the boys and girls were 65 calves and 160 pigs. Others were fruits, vegetables, sewing, cooking, and manual training. The success of the boys and girls could be seen in the displays and in the arrangement.

The program of the junior fair consisted of the inspection and judging of boys' and girls' exhibits, school exhibits, track meet and games. The Car-not band furnished the music and Mr. Rusy and L. M. Sasman, state superintendent of agricultural education, did the speaking.

The judging of calves, pigs and poultry was done by R. B. Bierl, farm crops by John Philipek and Dave Holt, home economics by Lucile Knoll and Noreen Valentine, and educational exhibits, W. E. Larson.

HOGS SHOW PROFIT ON HARVESTED CORN

When Hog Price Is Low and Corn Is High Direct Sale of Grain Is Better

Wooster, O.—Experiments completed at the Ohio agricultural experiment station here reveal that hogging down corn is sometimes less profitable than harvesting and feeding it to the hogs.

If the price of hogs is low and that of corn high, corn may bring more when sold as grain than as pork, says W. L. Robison. But if hogs are high and corn cheap, marketing corn through hogs will pay regardless of the method of feeding.

Whether hogging down corn is profitable, he explains, must be determined by comparing the returns gained from hogging down the corn with those from harvesting market value of the grain.

In the experiments, pigs fed harvested corn gained slightly faster than those on standing corn. They produced more gain in live weight per bushel from harvested corn, returns ranging from 14 to 20 cents a bushel more.

Such difference, Robison declares, usually more than covers the cost of harvesting and feeding the corn.

terized by a marked upward curling and dying of the tip beyond the point of greatest injury. It is spoken of as "hopperburn." Bordeaux mixture thoroughly applied is the best control known for the leafhopper. The three or five applications necessary should be made under high pressure with nozzles so directed that the spray will reach both sides of the leaves. This is highly important, as simple down-spraying is less efficient in reaching the under sides of the leaves where the hoppers work.

Never did baked beans have such flavor as those old-time beans baked in the "bean hole"—the outdoor oven—of the Maine woods lumber camps.

The great round-bellied bean pot was filled brim full with the richest of ingredients; then baked all night in a bed of glowing embers. No wonder those Maine woods beans had the fragrance of pine trees, the seasoning of wood smoke!

Everyone wanted that delightful outdoor flavor—but no home cook could attain it!

But a packer of distinctive foods has captured it, at last—in Bean Hole Beans. His own unique method brings it to you.

When Signs Were Speech

THOUSANDS of years ago man was forced to depend upon his physical strength for food and shelter. Life consisted, almost entirely, of obtaining a livelihood from the land

Man, at that time, had no definite language. Weird sounds, signs or peculiar gestures were his only means of communication.

Primitive man's world went as far as his voice and sight carried him. Yet primitive man, in his desire to make himself understood, expressed the need for better and faster methods of communication, which culminated in the telephone. More than eighteen million telephones now tie the United States into a compact telephone neighborhood.

Primitive man would have found it hard to get along without his stone hammer—it would be quite as hard, today, to get along without a telephone.

FRANCE WELCOMES LEGION
France's reception of the American Legion may not have been as vociferous as its reception of Col. Lindbergh, but it was sincere and generous. Perhaps it was not an occasion of wild acclaim, for mingled with the pleasure of coming together again are many sober memories. Both must feel at a time like this that their major obligations are to those who sacrificed their lives in the great cause. There are moments for both silent and spoken tributes to the dead, and there are moments for celebration. Each has its proper place in the reunion in Paris.

No untoward incident has occurred to mar the visit of the Legionnaires, notwithstanding advance predictions that there would be hostile demonstrations by communists and anti-Americans. Everywhere the reception has been cordial and frank. If the Frenchman has grievances against the United States over war debts, tariff or commerce, he has laid them aside during the time our doughboys are his guests.

In the background, no matter what superficial friction may crop out momentarily, there must always be a deep feeling of understanding between France and the United States. LaFayette and Pershing imply two great events that bind these nations with spiritual ties that will outlast mundane misunderstanding. As Premier Poincare eloquently expressed it at a banquet welcoming the Legion to Paris: "Faithful to the memory of the population and your brothers in arms, who witnessed your heroism, even more abiding than the most substantial monument, no Frenchman, indeed, will ever forget that you crossed the sea to fight shoulder to shoulder with the allies."

It was, then, eminently worthwhile to hold the Legion's annual convention in France. There is something in the experiences of war that transcends affairs political, social and financial. And it is well that it be drawn upon in an intimate, personal way from time to time. There is no danger of strife and unfriendliness between France and America. There may be misunderstandings, but they will be washed out. That they count for little at bottom is shown by the splendid reception accorded our war veterans and by the hero worship of Lindbergh only a few weeks preceding.

WIVES WITHOUT A COUNTRY
Owing to the passage of the Cable bill of Sept. 22, 1922, American naturalization legislation has created a class of wives without a country, whose position in international law is anomalous. Hitherto most countries have taken the position that a woman in marrying acquires her husband's nationality. With the exception of France and the United States all countries still follow that rule. But, whereas the proposed French law contains features of reciprocity which prevent the creation of a type of denationalized woman, the American act is so rigid in its terminology that instead of alleviating the legal position of women it has, in the opinion of many observers, actually aggravated it.

The purpose of the Cable act was to enable American women who had married foreign subjects, especially German and Austrian subjects, to reestablish their American citizenship at the close of the war and to release their property from the custody of the alien property custodian. The measure was, however, taken up by various feminist and women's organizations and advocated as a step in the general emancipation of women from medieval marriage bondage.

It appears that the rigid nature of the measure has brought it about that when an American marries a foreign woman the latter loses her foreign nationality under the laws of her country and does not obtain American nationality. She has no nationality, and should she desire to travel with her husband outside the jurisdiction of the United States she will discover that she is a human zero in international law.

She cannot get an American passport. The country of her origin will not give her a passport. She must obtain an alien return permit from the department of labor. In lieu of a passport she must execute affidavits and have them certified by American officials. Only then will foreign governments consent to give her a visa and take her fee.

Until the Cable act is amended or until the principle it represents is adopted by all other civilized governments, the foreign wives of American citizens will be literally women without a country.

ANOTHER FLYING ACHIEVEMENT
The single-motored monoplane, "Pride of Detroit," flew from Newfoundland to Tokyo, a distance of 12,295 miles, in 19 days. It is, we believe, the record for distance and time combined. This year, the famous Italian aviator, Pinedo, in what was called the four-continent flight, crossed the Atlantic to Brazil, flew to Argentina and thence north over the South American jungles to the Caribbean, touched at several West Indian islands, and arrived safely in New Orleans. In Arizona his plane was destroyed and another was sent from Italy. After flying over a large part of the United States, Pinedo took off from Newfoundland for the Azores, but was forced down into the sea by lack of fuel. He was towed to Horta and finally flew the balance of the way home via Lisbon and Barcelona. He covered a greater distance but in point of performance his flight was not to be compared with that of Schlee and Brock in the "Pride of Detroit." Their entire flight was with the regularity of a railroad schedule, with the exception of a short detention in Turkey and a two-day delay in Japan caused by a typhoon.

Schlee and Brock declared their purpose to be "to demonstrate how practical and serviceable travel by air is today." They planned to fly around the world, crossing both the Atlantic and Pacific, and they hoped to beat the time of the four American around-the-world fliers two years ago. Because of the supplication of their wives and children and of discouragements by both Japanese and American authorities, they gave up the flight. We think the general verdict will be that they were wise and that while they have demonstrated that long sustained and continuous flights are possible, they are only possible as yet by a combination of great courage, iron nerves and immunity to hardships. The chances are that had Schlee and Brock tried the Pacific they would have failed.

Every day one reads of airplane disasters, in commercial, mail, excursion, pleasure or scientific service. Flying is still a hazardous occupation and still a hazardous means of transportation. It is not yet sufficiently far advanced, although amazing feats have been performed, to warrant wholesale sacrifice of life, or in fact anything like the number of lives that have been lost this year in exploits and experiments.

THE OLD HOKUM HUNKER THE EXPERTS TELL

Nearly everybody with a modicum of sense agrees that it is poor policy for a layman to delve in morbid "doctor books" or pathological literature of any kind. A few people find this department not to their liking, because it provides no symptoms for them to try on, but on the other hand a great many readers with nothing the matter have the habit of taking a peep at this column to learn how to stay that way. Often it is not only desirable but advisable for an ailing person to read medical writings about his condition and its treatment. Nowadays this is practically indispensable for the successful treatment of diseases, and it is an aid to recovery that is more and more employed in the treatment of tuberculosis. When the patient is to undertake such study his physician should tell him precisely what literature to study and the wise patient should read nothing else. At any rate, it is scarcely necessary to point out the danger that lies in such reading if the one whose precious health or life is at stake undertakes to select his own reading without the approval of a reliable disinterested adviser.

A few weeks ago, discussing instances of food allergy or sensitization, we unfortunately quoted the experience of a correspondent who had suffered a hive-like swelling about the eye after eating tomatoes. It might just as well have been any other wholesome food item that contains any protein material—and most good foods contain some protein. But it just happened to be tomatoes.

From the time when the hermit charlatan "pronounced" tomatoes the cause of cancer, this healthful, succulent and for some conditions specific preventive and curative vegetable has been a favorite target for the vagaries of "food experts" who hold forth mainly in magazines catering to the moron population.

It is strange how credulous even educated people are about such things, and yet not so strange when we remember how thoroughly human physiology and hygiene are neglected and ignored in the "education" of our best people.

One correspondent quotes this from a book: Tomatoes—Ralston Health Club, founded . . . oxalic acid and are a direct poison to the blood, nerves, bones and muscles, and one of the direct causes of rheumatism . . .

Now, adds the correspondent, with the medical and the food experts at variance with each other and both at variance with the chemists, where does the poor layman come in?

The chemist, the correspondent cites is one Irene C. Namur, lecturer, who said tomatoes have some food value and contain oxygen and iodine. These facts may be at variance with some of the "food experts" hokum, but not with any medical teaching. So the clash narrows down to our dog and another dog.

How does a "food expert" happen anyway. Why, it's as simple as customers. He inserts a $20 ad of his "course" in Faraday Culture, and if enough suckers bite, he is from that issue a "food expert." As the orders increase he branches out into more pretentious magazines and eventually even the high-brow periodicals are glad to sell him space and boost him in their alleged reading columns.

A RUN ON THE NATURAL RESERVE BANK

Washington, D. C. What may be regarded as the greatest run ever made on the nation's Natural Reserve Bank is described by Dr. Work, Secretary of the Interior and chairman of the Federal Oil Conservation Board in an address before the mineral law section of the American Bar Association to-day. Present day civilization makes so great demands on fuels and metals and a score of other raw materials, he said, that the nation needs to balance its accounts and see how long the Natural Reserve Bank can continue to honor its regular drafts.

The over-draft of the oil industry alone is estimated to be at present at the rate of approximately 1,000,000 barrels a day, or considerably more than one-third the total production for the current year which is expected to reach 900 million barrels. And in his estimate of the over-production he did not take into account the waste which some experts say runs as high as two to one—that is, for every barrel of crude oil taken out of the ground, two barrels are left underground under conditions such that they can never be recovered.

"Less than 70 years ago," said the Secretary in epitomizing the amazing growth of the oil industry, "the first well struck oil at 68 feet to-day wells are drilled to a depth of a mile and a half. In 1861, two years after Col. Drake's well started this industry the country's production for 12 months was much less than our wells have produced in the last 24 hours. Last year more than 300,000 wells of the United States produced over three-fourths of a billion barrels, and this year the output from these wells and the new gushers will exceed 900 million barrels—a flood of oil that takes on the proportion of a national disaster."

"Measured by the usual standard of value, this industry has grown in 20 years from a capital investment of $750,000,000 to something around $11,000,000,000. Measured by the standard of use, the products of this industry have now become the lifeblood of transportation on the surface of the earth, in the air above, and in the waters beneath. The distance between continents is now measured in gallons of gasoline."

ILL OF OVERPRODUCTION
The oil industry is sick—grie vously sick—of what might be termed overproductionitis and heroic treatment or a major operation is indicated. Home remedies have failed. What is to be done? The industry seems unable to do anything to "cure" itself. Specialists must be called in, and Dr. Work suggested the calling in of some doctors of law to treat the sick industry. More than a year ago, he said, the Federal Oil Conservation Board urged the formulation and adoption of remedial measures, and yet no constructive move has been made. Are we to indulge in this watchful waiting for disaster, he asked. "Overproduction to-day is injuring millions who have their wealth invested in oil properties; it is injuring the great producing and refining companies; it is depleting a natural resource which can never be replaced."

"The chief cause of overproduction is overcompetition. Nature and human nature see into have conspired to make the oil game a game of chance. To judge from the remarkable progress made in the past decade in oil geology and oil engineering, it might seem that conquering nature is easier than restraining human nature seem to have conspired to win out in their attack on nature with the result that oil is being found more quickly and wells are being drilled more quickly and the under ground supply is being brought to the surface more quickly. With all this speeding up of nature, however, no one seems to have thought of attempting to work on human nature, where there is urgent need of applying the brakes."

The ordinary workings of the economic law of supply and demand find no chance in the business of producing petroleum. The Secretary pointed out. The decision to drill does not wait on market reports; demand for the product is rarely a factor in influencing the development of oil property—simply the desire to get the oil before some one else gets it. Thus, as in no other activity, the oil industry thrives on financial conservatism and business sagacity to the winds and indulges in the primitive instincts of the chase.

PRICE REGULATION NOT NEEDED

The present trouble is not one of price, demanding regulation in terms of the consumer, but rather one of conservation measures to prevent overproduction and permit the stabilization of the industry that will serve both producer and consumer, continued the Secretary. The single item of gasoline prices may obscure our long-distance vision of the larger problem.

Owners of more than 22,000,000 automobiles are interested in the price of gasoline and watch the rise and fall of price levels constantly, and carefully, he said. But they are too much inclined to remember the days of low prices and forget that prices have repeatedly risen to higher levels than prevail at present. They remember the low prices of 1914 and 1915, when the flush production of the Cushing field forced the price of crude oil to the low level of 30 cents a barrel, and they forget the high price of 1920 when there was a threatened shortage of crude and gasoline soared to the highest point for many years—31 cents a gallon in New York City.

Automobilists who are unsympathetic in their attitude toward the oil industry because of the price they have to pay for gasoline should remember, too, that practically every State now collects a tax of from 1 to 5 cents a gallon on that product, which is a price factor for which the oil industry is in no wise to be blamed.

"The outstanding fact in the present situation," said Secretary Work, "is that during the last few years new and large producing fields, developed to capacity under conditions of rapid and competitive exploitation have produced a supply of oil far above and beyond the demand of essential use. The market has been deluged with so great a supply that petroleum has been forced into keen and violent competition with coal in nearly all its area of consumption, with the result that possibly one-half of America's oil production is being used to displace the legitimate and equally effective use of coal."

"The waste of natural gas incident to the past and present methods of capturing oil at the surface is prodigious and extravagant, and the gas thus lost is estimated to be equivalent in value and effectiveness to a very large percentage of all the petroleum actually subjected to control ownership."

"In the light of these developments it can hardly be urged that the time is not ripe for rigid economy and conservation of this great and useful natural resource."

The Secretary of the Interior did not present his solution of the oil problem, nor did he indicate that the Oil Conservation Board is prepared to make specific recommendations as to laws that should be passed or other steps that may be taken.

See-Sawing On Broadway
By Gilbert Swan

New York—Somebody once said that if you stand long enough at the corner of 42d street and Broadway you'll meet everyone you ever heard of.

You can put me on record as adding to this and if you go to the passport office, you'll see everyone you've met at the 42d street corner. It's one place that will keep constantly upon your lips the old wheeze: "Well, well, it's a pretty small world after all."

For example, I have been an off-and-on visitor at the passport office these days preparing for a visit to Paris. I have taken as my witness a chap who had newspapered with me in San Francisco. Through the marble corridors milled the usual crowd of Americans going abroad and foreigners returning home. At the information desk, the most patient girl I have ever beheld for a while was explaining to this person and to that.

Just ahead of us was a fellow of about 30. Obviously he was not of New York. His skin was tanned to the shade of old parchment. His clothing showed the marks of much traveling. He seemed one who had wandered much. In a moment he was eagerly pleading with the clerk. "You see," he said, "my birth certificate was lost in the fire."

My witness and I exchanged glances. "The fire," he had said. We nudged one another. We knew the high-sign. He hadn't said "the quake" . . . he had said "the fire." A fellow San Franciscan!

At once we interrupted, rescuing him to explain a few pointers gained from the experiences of friends. We were engaged in animated conversation. "Where'd you live?" asked my witness.

"Polk street . . . by the way, my name's Hicks. I engineer. I'm headed for Peru . . . the nitrate outfit. . . . Chill last year, but got my passport west where somebody knew me . . . too high there, though . . . had to work in an altitude of 18,000 feet. . . . Where'd you go to school?"

"I remember the old no-halt-over-at-Say, whatever became of Pisco John's? . . . Were you there in the fire?"

In a second we had traveled back down the years and over the rails back to a hillside dipping down to the Hayes Valley. All about us haggled the groups of travelers, some babbling in broken English, some undergoing a cross-examination. Time and space disappeared and we were all back in the "home port," when the curt voice of a clerk brought us the message of the present and reality.

"Wanta hold up this line all day?"

Of course we didn't. As we walked away from the desk I looked around. In these places I saw old cronies meeting and greeting and slapping the back. The girl at the information desk smiled. "We're used to it. It happens at least once an hour. This is a place that makes you realize how small the world is."

The PENNY PRINCESS

VERA CAMERON, private secretary, agrees to let JERRY MACK-LYN, advertising manager for Peach Bloom Cosmetics, transform her into a beauty through the use of the company cosmetics. She agrees only after she falls suddenly in love with a man who ignores her.

Jerry proposes to use her photographs in the company's advertising. In transforming her, the beauty specialist uses as a model a picture Jerry finds in his desk. Vera wants to be beautiful so she can spend her vacation at Lake Minnetonka and meet the man she loves, SCHUYLER SMYTHE.

At the summer hotel, Smythe and other guests mistake her for the princess, Vivian Crandall, who after a divorce in Paris, has disappeared and is in hiding. Vera, sometimes called Vee-Vee, attempts to convince people of her real identity but is unsuccessful.

Schuyler is devotedly attentive to Vera, much to the jealousy of NAN FOSDICK, to whom, it is rumored, he is engaged for her money. Vera reads an account of Vivian's disappearance and the hunt that is being instituted for her. She starts to wire Jerry but reconsiders and wants to find him in the tangle. Thurston, the hotel manager, comes to her room and asks her to notify her parents of her whereabouts. She again states her identity but is not believed. She joins Schuyler for golf, determined to make the most of the next few hours, before inevitable exposure of her unintentional imposture.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXV
As the day wore on Vee-Vee began to wonder almost hysterically if Thurston, the manager of the Minnetonka, had enlisted the aid of all the hotel guests in keeping her from being alone with Schuyler Smythe. For the two found themselves practically surrounded by the friends they had both made since their arrival at the hotel.

Their golf game became a four-some, without the bewildered couple's knowing exactly how it had happened. There was no opportunity for more than a few words between them as they played down the green, a fact which made Schuyler turn childishly sulky.

They lunched together, but there was necessarily little privacy in the crowded hotel dining room. After lunch Schuyler suggested a drive in his car, but when he tried to start the motor he found that it was unaccountably dead.

"It's a plot," he told Vee-Vee in angry desperation. "I'll wager that interfering ass, Thurston, had one of the chauffeurs put my car out of commission. I suppose he thinks I'm going to try to abduct you, and that that will get him in Dutch with the high and mighty Crandalls. I wish he'd mind his own business."

Vee-Vee laughed with pretended gaiety, but in her heart she feared that Schuyler was right. Thurston was not taking any chances on a mesalliance being contracted in his hotel. He valued the good will of the "high and mighty Crandalls" too much for that. If he contrived that Vivian Crandall—as he thought Vee-Vee to be—should at last be delivered intact and in good conditions to her anxious parents, he would have them everlastingly in his gratitude, and the Hotel Minnetonka would benefit accordingly. Undoubtedly he had visions of Crandalls' summering gratefully at the Minnetonka and bringing in their train the very cream of New York society.

Schuyler hired one of the hotel rowboats and took Vee-Vee out upon the lake, but immediately a dozen other boats followed them, circled about them, their occupants calling out gay quipps, taunting Schuyler with laughing challenges for a race.

"Oh, damn!" Schuyler said in deep disgust, as he whirled his boat toward the landing. "I'm going to see you alone if I have to come up to your room. Though I suppose the house detective would follow me there and throw me out of the hotel. Thurston would love that!" he added, with a vicious stab of his ear into the smiling waters of the lake.

"There's still the evening left, a whole evening before anything is likely to happen," Vee-Vee consoled herself, as she and Schuyler walked toward the hotel after their comically chartered boat ride.

"Vee-Vee," Schuyler laid a hand on her arm and detained her as she was about to ascend the steps of the wide front porch. "If they should come for you—those damned detectives I mean, or your parents—promise me that you won't go without letting me talk to you alone. It means life and death to me, Vee-Vee! Promise!"

For the first time she realized how harassed he must be, knowing, as he must, that Vivian Crandall was being sought by private detectives hired by her parents. He must be bitter with despair over the fact that the girl he had loved hopelessly for five years was about to be whisked away from him, just when he had almost succeeded in winning her.

"Don't worry, dear," she said in a low voice, addressing him with an endearment for the first time. "Thurston has promised me not to interfere, not to notify—the Crandalls. Believe me, dear, when I tell you that Mr. and Mrs. Crandall have absolutely no power over me."

She flushed with shame at the sorry way in which she had saved herself from what she evaded the truth. But she saw, to her relief, that Schuyler Smythe was neither surprised nor shocked at her peculiar manner or referring to the people whom he believed to be her parents.

She was passing through the lobby on her way to the elevators when a strident, half-masculine, half-feminine voice halted her. She knew the voice well, knew that it was Nan Fosdick's rather terrible mother who was hailing her.

"Oh, Lord, what next?" she groaned to herself, but the face which she turned to Mrs. Fosdick was a smilingly polite one.

"Want to talk to you, young woman," Mrs. Fosdick boomed. "Will you come up to my suite?"

"Won't you come to my room?" Vee-Vee smiled, with a malicious little emphasis on the last word. Mrs. Fosdick let pass no opportunity to impress her wealth upon anyone she came in contact with.

Although they were the only two passengers in the ascending elevator Vee-Vee felt crowded. Mrs. Fosdick was so overwhelmingly big that she seemed to fill the car. She was like a caricature of her daughter, Nan was big, her mother was huge. Nan's aquiline nose became a beak on the older woman's face. Little pig-like black eyes were almost submerged between overhanging black brows and puffy ridges of flesh.

As soon as they entered her room, Vee-Vee went to the phone and gave an order for iced tea, iced coffee, sandwiches and cakes, to be sent up immediately.

"She'll be in a better humor if she is eating," Vee-Vee told herself with a grin.

"Now looka here, Vivian Crandall, I've come here to have a frank talk with you," Mrs. Fosdick began ominously.

"Oh, do let's wait until the iced drinks arrive," Vee-Vee begged, with her most ingratiating smile. "I'm dreadfully hungry. Rowing makes me ravenous. I've noticed that you take iced tea, Mrs. Fosdick. Don't you think the coffee is delicious here?"

"Nothing to compare with the New Orleans coffee or the Vienna coffee," Mrs. Fosdick contradicted her flatteringly, but she eased her bulk into the large chair and relaxed a trifle.

Vee-Vee kept her remark about her European travels or rather about European food—until the waiter had arrived and departed. When Mrs. Fosdick had consumed three sandwiches and half of her tall glass of iced coffee, Vee-Vee permitted her, without further struggle, to open the subject which had brought her there.

"Now, Vivian Crandall—" Mrs. Fosdick's Vee-Vee corrected her softly. "Well, whatever you want to call yourself—I suppose it's none of my business—but I feel it my duty to tell you the truth about that young man you and my daughter Nan have been making such fools of yourselves over."

"You don't think, Mrs. Fosdick, that I'm a swank hotel? Didn't I do the same thing? Of course he likes this kind of life, the kind of people he can meet at a place like this! Who wouldn't? But I'll know tonight beyond the shadow of a doubt whether it is me he loves—or 40 million dollars."

"Mrs. Fosdick, I can't allow you to go on!" Vee-Vee cried vehemently, jumping to her feet. "Have you finished your sandwiches?" she asked with rude significance.

When Mrs. Fosdick had made a stammering exit, Vee-Vee flung herself down upon the chaise longue and burst into a fit of weeping.

When the storm had spent itself, she sat up, dabbing at her eyes with a wet ball of handkerchief. "I don't care! I don't believe he's a fortune hunter. I'm glad he's poor, just a secretary like me. After all, he's committed no crime. What if the poor dear does save all year to go to a swank hotel? Didn't I do the same thing? Of course he likes this kind of life, the kind of people he can meet at a place like this! Who wouldn't? But I'll know tonight beyond the shadow of a doubt whether it is me he loves—or 40 million dollars."

Schuyler proposes in the next chapter, still thinking Vee-Vee an heiress and a princess. She decides to tell him.

"I'm sure that's all," Vee-Vee smiled. "But we are not discussing the Crandalls. Mrs. Fosdick. But oh—oh, go on. I'm sure you have something to say to me which you consider important. Is it about Nan, Mrs. Fosdick?"

"No, it's not about Nan. It's about that fortune-hunter that calls himself Schuyler Smythe. Schuyler Smythe!" she repeated scornfully. "I'll hand it to him that he picked out a good name while he was about it," she snorted.

"I know Mr. Smythe's original name," Vee-Vee told her serenely, but beneath her arrogant calm her heart was pounding with sickening rapidity. What did this terrible person know against Schuyler Smythe?

"Then I guess you know too that Mr. Shuler B. Smith," Mrs. Fosdick swept on triumphantly, using the name of which Vee-Vee had caught a glimpse when Schuyler had dropped an envelope, "is just a penniless fortune-hunter that makes a profession of summer vacationing."

"Of course I know nothing of the sort," Vee-Vee retorted. "But I fail to see why you insist upon discussing Mr. Smythe's affairs with me."

"Because you're being taken in by him, just as my poor Nan was," Mrs. Fosdick panted. "I saw through him right away, but nothing could turn Nan against him. I wired a detective agency in New York to get a line on him for me and their report arrived today. Do you want to see it?"

"No," Vee-Vee said, almost in a whisper. "Then you're a bigger fool than I thought you were," Mrs. Fosdick snapped. "But I'm going to do my duty by you anyway. Your mother will thank me," she added righteously. "Your fascinating gentleman is just a secretary. His fashionable East Fifty-Fourth Street address, which he used to impress everyone with, is not his own address, but that of his employer, Mr. Arthur Bainbridge. Bainbridge is in Maine at his camp and he gives this young scamp a two weeks' vacation every summer, allowing him to use one of his cars. Bumpers the next summer, makes him think he's as good as his betters," she snorted. "Just cheap little salaried man, saving his money 11 months of the year to make a splurge in a hotel like this. Makes the rounds of the swell hotels, where he knows he'll meet rich men's daughters—like my Nan and like you. Just a cheap four-flusher, a fortune-hunter."

"Mrs. Fosdick, I can't allow you to go on!" Vee-Vee cried vehemently, jumping to her feet. "Have you finished your sandwiches?" she asked with rude significance.

When Mrs. Fosdick had made a stammering exit, Vee-Vee flung herself down upon the chaise longue and burst into a fit of weeping.

FROST PREDICTED FOR TUESDAY NIGHT

University Expert Doesn't Think Freezing Weather Will Damage Crops

Frost is predicted for Tuesday night according to official weather reports. The forecast is that it will be cool and fair in most of the state excepting the southwest where the temperature is not expected to drop to frost.

The abrupt change in the weather which resulted in the wearing of top coats and overcoats within a period of 24 hours after this section of the state had been sweltering, does not seem to have affected the farmers. Most of them had started cutting slugs last week and the cool weather and rain Tuesday morning are not expected to stop the work.

Early reports from the state following the first drop in temperature indicated that up to that time little or no damage had been done to agricultural crops, prevailing winds and the warm

SUNSHINE REVUE
Offering a musical repertoire complete from the classics to the popular music of the day, the Four Musical Kings, one of the features of Arthur Hauk's offering, the Sunshine Revue, appearing at Fischer's Appleton theatre Thursday and Friday capture the hearts of the music loving public from the moment of their first appearance on the stage.

Led by Arthur Hauk, who is a mandolin and banjo player par excellence, the quartet offers a program of harmony different from the usual instrumental numbers featured in the production of today. Barney Klepper, Claude Reed and Tom Collins complete the harmony four, whose playing and singing score the biggest hits in the revue. Tom Collins, whose comedy antics carry his audience into the realms of laughter during the entire production, carries his characterization into the work of the quartet and introduces additional punch into the music.

Aside from producing and staging the revue and leading the quartet, Arthur Hauk is also the composer of many of the music scores used in the production. His Kiwanis March, written during last season's tour, has been played from coast to coast before the Kiwanis Clubs and has scored sensational hits everywhere.

In addition to the Musical Kings, the Sunshine Revue features Helen Kennedy, the rainy soubrette, Tom

Will America Accept "Trouser Skirts" For Women? Culottes Accepted In Paris

WOMEN, it seems, are determined to "wear the trousers." Culottes or skirts. That seems to be the question this fall, with the bifurcated skirt in the lead. London and Paris have accepted the new trouser-skirt. America seems about to. Certainly the pajama fad on beach verandah this summer pointed to this and autumn styles prove that there's a real leaning towards this type of neither-nor.

These are no tight, mannish, trouser-like affairs, these new divided skirts. Rather, they take almost double the material of the former, straight or wrap-around, and they demand a master hand to cut them.

In clever, subtle ways, they conceal the division with a panel, a drape, a slash or gorgeous fringe, and all one notes is a graceful skirt while the wearer rejoices in absolute freedom of motion. Smart daytime dresses, sports frocks and even gowns sponsor the culotte.

Lanvin, Worth, Chanel, Caret and other Paris designers have adapted the culotte to evening use and an amazing array of gleaming, shimmering, gorgeous creations in chiffons, transparent velvet and laces, all with divided skirts, have resulted.

Worth, foremost among those sponsoring the new style in skirts, has fashioned many of his velvet suits and dresses with culottes. A brown velvet street suit has divided skirt but so cleverly do they pleat into the waist that they look like a skirt. Newest of the divided skirts is the "prohibition skirt" which serves double duty of giving freedom to its wearer at the same time aiding her to maintain personal freedom by hiding liquor within its folds. Four pockets, one on the front and back of each trouser, yawn for a bottle each. This skirt is said to be tremendously popular with Americans about to embark for home.

Whatever the future of the culotte suffice it that it holds high popularity right this minute. It may eventually suffer the fate of the obsolete straight gown. But in the boudoir, for house wear, for sports, the street and the dance, the divided skirt right now gains standing each day.

TWENTY-EIGHT YEAR OLD WOMAN IS COPY CENSOR

Moscow—(P)—A 25-year-old woman is the vacation censor of all news dispatches leaving Russia.

She is Miss Anna Goldfarb, daughter of a Leningrad artisan. She completed a philological course at the University of Leningrad in 1919 and has since risen high in the councils of the Soviet Foreign Office.

Her friends are predicting a brilliant career for her and many of them think she should enter the Soviet diplomatic service.

So far she has held her own with firmness and judgment against a corps of foreign newspaper correspondents who have not always seen eye to eye with her as to the merits of their "copy." She passes upon every line of cable copy out of the Soviet Union.

Miss Goldfarb was chosen from the scores of employees of the Commissariat of Foreign Relations to fill this important post not alone because of her knowledge of several languages, but more particularly owing to her proven loyalty to revolutionary principles.

She was named "vacation relief" for Varlness Podolsky, the regular incumbent, and her duties require her attendance at her post with intervals off from early morning until after midnight daily.

THE TINYMITES

My what a pretty bridge we've found," said Copsy, stepping to the ground. "I wonder who that fellow is who's paddling right up near." And then we Copsy slowly asked, "Oh, yes, I wish he'd let us ride. And maybe, too, he'll tell us all that we can swim in here."

The man who ran the funny boat began to sing, in tuneless note, "Come ride in my gondola, all you funny little men. I seldom take folks out with me, but real nice kids you seem to be, so come along and try it once. You'll want to go again."

"You let me will," the whole bunch cried. "That's something we have never tried. We've been in lots of boats, of course, but not in one like that. Say, will you take us all around, and is it good and safe and sound?" The man then answered, "It can't tip. The bottom's very flat."

Up to the bridge the boat then drew. The first thing that the Tinymites knew, the friendly man had joined them. Then, in very friendly tone, he said, "I think I'll stay behind, that is if you kids will not mind I'll show you how to paddle. You take the boat alone."

"I'll do the paddling," Copsy said. The man replied, "Well, go ahead." So Copsy hopped right in the boat, soon followed by the rest. "Sit down," he cried, "and all sit still. I've never run this sort of boat, but I will do my best."

The friendly man stood up on shore. To each the Tinymites made him nod. They paddled slowly down the stream and then they turned around. "You'd best come in," the man then cried. And Copsy, when he'd tried and tried, soon in the queer gondola slide right safely in on ground.

(The Tinymites land in Switzerland in the next story.)

Then And Now--

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

To Cherry's almost hysterical plea to accompany Bob and her sister on their trip to Peach Tree Hollow, in search of the old negress, known as Aunt Chloe, Chris' former nurse, Faith firmly advanced the following argument:

"My hunch that Chris has taken the baby to his old negro nurse may be entirely erroneous, and word may come at any time from the police department, that the baby has been found elsewhere. In that case, you would want to be here, of course. Besides, you are too excitable, and Chris himself might be there and a terrible scene result. No, you're going to stay here, darling."

Bob in the meantime, had commanded Mrs. Minnock's little blue coupe explaining that Chris Wiley undoubtedly knew the Hathaway car by sight, and if he saw it everting around in Peach Tree Hollow, might be warned in time to escape with the baby. On the same principle, Faith swathed her hat with a voluminous silk scarf and Bob attempted a slight disguise by donning one of Jim Lane's old slouch felt hats and a pair of enormous motor goggles.

"Not that I think Chris Wiley has done anything so obvious as to hide the baby right here in the city," he told Faith, but the sight of her despairing disappointment made him add: "But your reasoning is surprisingly acute, darling. You may have hit upon something."

"I reasoned that Chris would feel utterly helpless with a tiny baby on his hands, that he would not dare attempt a long journey with her, knowing that the police all over the state would be on the lookout for him. He would naturally think of the one person he can trust absolutely and the one person who, in his mind, is connected with taking care of babies—his own old nurse. Of course the old negress wouldn't have the least idea how to feed Hope. But a man like Chris wouldn't think of that. We've got to get her away from the old woman before she can poison our baby's stomach with the wrong kind of feeding." Faith explained.

"I thought you were interested in giving Hope back into my arms," she choked, unable to keep back the betraying words. "I've mothered Hope since she was born. She's more my baby than Chris's."

"What did you say that street and number were?" Bob interrupted, as if he had not sensed the undercurrent in her protest. "We're entering Peach Tree Hollow now, honey."

Next, Faith and Bob in the horrors of "Shantytown."

IF WE COULD ONLY SEE THINGS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

CATHERINE Brush writes a story called "Night Club" in a September magazine.

Mrs. Brady, the maid in the dressing room of a night club just west of Sixth Avenue, on her way to work at ten o'clock P.M. Meridian, buys a magazine of thrilling stories, to read during the intermission of the evening's entertainment. That is an intermission for her, when her patrons were occupied with a special act on the dance floor.

Mrs. Brady had her magazine until that precious time would come.

In the meantime—

A beautiful dark girl in white velvet came in to put on more rouge and lipstick. She was little. She sang over and over a bit of a tune. "Oh, I know my baby loves me! Oh, I know my baby loves me!" Just before she passed through the satin hung doorway to the calaret, she dragged off her wedding ring, wrapped it in a lace handkerchief and tucked it down the bodice of her dress. Then she opened

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

ORANGE LINE BOTHERS COACHES ON EVE OF WAUPUN GAME

Appleton High Mentors Shift Lineman In Effort To Gain More Strength

Kruse, Veteran Lineman, Out of Practice and Possibly Waupun Battle

ON MARKET

Dissatisfied with the work of his line, with only four days remaining before the first game of the season, that with the classy Waupun high school squad at Waupun, Coach Joseph Shields sent his Appleton high school griders through a hard afternoon of scrimmage Monday at Spencer-st. field. The Orange mentor was a trifle gloomy over the chances of his squad to break the 10-game win streak of the Prison city lads, which has extended over two years, because of the line's play.

The backfield worked well except for fumbles, which were numerous because of the cold weather and soft balls, caused by the sudden change of weather, and this inability of his backs to handle the pigskin well also had the coach worried. Every man who fumbled a ball got an extra five laps of running at the end of the practice.

The bright spots of the line's work was the play of the veterans Capt. Gerschow and Hartung. Many of the backfield gains were made through large holes opened by the former and he tore through opposing linemen with the style that made him feared in the last year. Kruse, another veteran, who was expected to be a bulwark at tackle this year, was not out Monday and it was reported that he would not be out all week, a tough blow on the eve of the Waupun game as unless he is in a suit by Thursday he will not get into the game at all or for only a few minutes. He will be worked extra hard for his carelessness when he appears.

One ray of hope came when it was known that Shafter, 1926 regular end, would be able to don a suit toward the end of the week, though his injured knee will keep him out of one or two games yet, except possibly for a couple minutes. Bowley, fearless second guard reserve quarterback, suffered a twisted ankle in Monday's practice that may bother him.

The backfield which looked the best had Strutz at quarter, Roemer and Popp at half, and Johnston at full-back. Johnston showed his usual plunging ability, speed and fight and passed well and Strutz seemed to have more speed than last fall. Roemer went well on end runs and his interference gave him a good start, using his speed to advantage. Popp also worked well on plunges through the line, though he still is weak in blocking opposing tacklers from his mates. Two other sets of backs were used before the first team rear wall.

In the line Rankin worked at center with Hartung and Brietrick, a soph. at ends and Gerschow at a tackle. The rest of the line saw Elias, Redin, DeYoung, Kranhold, Rectz and several others alternating the jobs, with Elias showing much improvement in his play.

SUNDAY GAMES

Little Chute 5, De Pere 1
Kimberly 16, Onondaga 1

Little Chute clinched the 1927 inter-county baseball league pennant Sunday in the final game by beating its closest rival, De Pere, 5-1 at De Pere. The game was won by De Pere in the final frame a few weeks ago, and the Chutesmen protested it. The loop officials ordered it played over. Little Chute now has a two-game lead, whereas a loss would have meant a tie for the top notch with De Pere.

In the other game Kimberly tied Wrightstown for third place in the loop with a 16-1 win over Onondaga. Wrightstown and Freedom, the cellar squad, had already finished their schedules. Each team got five hits in the Chute-De Pere game, but those of the De Pere men were more successful. De Pere made four errors and Little Chute three. Stoffel, Chute hurler fanned 15 men while his opponent,

15 Lettermen To Greet New Purple Grid Coach

Chicago—(AP)—Defense of a Big Ten football championship rests upon the shoulders of the newcomer in conference coaching ranks, Richard L. Hanley, of Northwestern University. But he has 15 letter men of last year's as the nucleus of his squad this year, and 63 with grid training in Purple colors.

Hanley is expected to introduce an entirely new system of football to the conference this season. He was brought up on the Warner system in his own playing days at Washington State, and he followed the same methods with great success while coaching the Haskell Indians.

Both the Haskell and the shift are reminiscent from Hanley's plans for the Wildcats this fall. And "Moon" Baker will be missing, too.

As quarterback, Baker was the leading spirit and created all around player of the team. Hanley has Capt. E. Gustafson and "Tiny" Lewis left of the 1926 backfield, with George Lawson and Walt Holmer, of last year's letter winners, to round out the first string backfield. Lewis has been

APPLETON MATMAN WINS STATE LIGHT HEAVY TITLE MATCH

Joe McVey Takes Two Falls from Howard Blazer, Oconto, in 18 Minutes

Appleton is the home of the new light heavyweight wrestling champion of Wisconsin as the result of a match Sunday evening at Oconto in which Joe McVey of this city threw Howard Blazer, of Oconto, the title-holder, twice in 18 minutes. McVey upset Blazer the first time in 14 minutes with a stepover toehold and finished the work just 14 minutes later with a head scissors and wrist-lock.

McVey has quite a reputation around Appleton as a wrestler, but he has never really attempted to enter the contender ranks as each winter he goes south as wrestling coach for one of the largest colleges in Dixie. This winter he may stay in Appleton and if he does he probably will defend his title and stage several matches. He is well known for his work in defeating the mat hopes of most every carnival that plays in this vicinity.

FOOLS HIS RIVAL
The Appleton man has been after a match with Blazer for some time, but the Oconto has always sidestepped the issue. A little trick brought the pair together Sunday. Blazer was to meet any opponent his weight, but was not expecting McVey, and his eyes nearly popped from his head as the local man stepped in to the ring. McVey had secured the match, with the assistance of an Appleton man, but had kept his identity a secret. Oconto now is bidding for a return match at that city soon, anxious to see the man who has beaten his hero in his class for the first time in several years and also hoping to see Blazer regain the crown at home. Blazer weighs about 180 and McVey, 178.

McVey faces competition right in his home city, should a rival care to challenge his claim. Earl "Lump" Wilmot, star light heavyweight of Superior, has moved here and has started a campaign against the leading grapplers of the vicinity. He meets Blazer at Spruce on Wednesday, Sept. 28, and is confident of victory, in which case he would be a logical challenger of McVey. Wilmot is ex-light, heavyweight champ of the Army, Navy and Marine corps and has a crippled leg from a football injury. He is willing to meet any light heavy or heavy in the game.

SUNDAY GAMES

Freedom 17, Black Creek 3
Shiocton at Black Creek (final game)

Freedom, clinched the 1927 Wolf River league pennant Sunday at Freedom with an easy victory over its ancient jinx, Black Creek, 17-3. The size of the score tells the story of the game and the Freedomites showed by their play that they deserved the banner. Had Freedom lost it would have been tied for first with Manawa, which now holds second place for the year by a single game. Before Sunday Black Creek's third place team had piled up five wins over Freedom in six loop struggles.

Freedom pined up enough runs the first few innings to win the game and after that the game was loosely played, which resulted in the big score as Freedom was out to win and did not take any chances of having the game snatched away in a previous week, when it lost 5 to 6 after leading 5 to 0 for seven innings. Black Creek next Sunday to close the season for the loop. A hot contest is expected at Black Creek and a large crowd is expected from Shiocton as a keen rivalry exists between these teams and Shiocton is out to give Black Creek another trimming.

FAT SWAT MARK
Did Purdy, recently bought by Cincinnati, has a batting average around the .360 mark in the Pacific Coast League. Purdy started as quarterback for Beloit college and the Green Bay Packers in the last two years.

Kellerman, had 5. Evers caught for the Gutters and McHugh for the losers. At Kimberly the villagers made 14 hits off Moon and the Indians added 15 runs to aid the K-C crew. Evers limited Onondaga to three hits and his mates erred but once. Wellhouse caught for Kimberly and Swamp for Onondaga.

BLOOMER IS BACK
Francis Bloomer, quarterback on last fall's eleven, will return to school here but will not play football until after the six weeks' exams are over. To all appearances he will be able to get into the late season games and will probably be able to take part in practice and aid the first squad back.

The Lawrence fresh squad has been ordered out for its first practice Wednesday afternoon and it is expected that a large crew of former high school stars will report. The fresh will open their season against Earl McCaw's strong Kenosha high champs early in October.

JENNINGS HELPS CAUSE OF MARQUETTE SPORTS

Marquette — Without cost of arena or any advance ballshoe, Conrad M. Jennings, Marquette university athletic director, recently established himself as a first-rate long distance swimmer, at the same time, furthered the cause of Marquette football. While watching the "Marquette" swimmers train on the shore at Lake Mendota recently, Mr. Jennings became boastful and declared he could swim to the mainland and back, a distance of more than a mile. A friend said he could

HUSKY COACH

AL ULBRICKSON
Rusty Callow's successor at Washington as head coach of the Huskies is Al Ulbrickson, a young man who in his collegiate days was regarded as one of the greatest strokes in this country. Ulbrickson is a Seattle native and his appointment as coach of the Washington crew was popular with the natives out there.

CARD COACHES LOOK FOR STRONG KICKER

Schuette, Manitowoc Guard, Best Booter, but Back Is Desired

Madison — (AP) — The first week of training having passed, Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite at the University of Wisconsin this week went from generalities to specific problems—who will kick?—being one of the major ones.

Lack of a back to care for the booting assignment may cause the former Northwestern mentor considerable trouble, although there are candidates who may be able to push the shoe adroitly.

All of the good ones were lost by graduation except Paul Schuette, who was jerked from the line to do some of the leg raising last season. A guard, he is said to be "head and shoulders above the other kickers." But Thistlethwaite and Sundt, helping him with the booting angle of the game, are determined that they shall find a back to do the toe slinging.

Captain "Toad" Crofoot, called upon occasionally last season to punt, has been taking his turn at it in the drills this season, but the little Badger leader hasn't the foot-power to send the pig's epidermis sufficient distance.

Levy Smith and Harold Rehbock, two leading recruits for fullback are being worked with the punting squad. The former may develop with a bit more supervision and Rehbock is making Smith step at a lively pace in the battle for the regular full position. Mansfield, reserve back last fall, has been shifted over to "Stub" Allison's squad of end candidates.

Thistlethwaite is also worried about the wings as there seems to be no exceptional ends to relieve the veterans, Cameron and Welch. It may be that Mansfield can be used to better advantage there than in the backfield, as he hasn't the charge or power in his legs that a line-plunger must possess.

With classes opening soon the Conference ruling limiting the practice of the Cardinals staff has been making use of every opportunity to teach their charges the new style of game that Wisconsin will play under Thistlethwaite. A number of formations have already been handed out, and scrimmages is held twice daily.

Contrary to his first decision, Thistlethwaite has decided to make a slight cut in his squad this week. There are too many boys out here who simply haven't the stuff to play Big Ten football and I see no reason of keeping them on for several weeks when they might well be spending their time elsewhere," he said.

GIANT FLAG HOPES REVIVE; BUGS LOSE

McGraw Men Beat Reds as Pirates Lose to Dodgers; Cubs Win a Game

Waning hopes of the New York Giants for the National League pennant were somewhat revived Tuesday with only three and one half games separating John McGraw's club from the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Giants have ten games left to play, four of them with the Pirates. Not only would the Giants have to win their series with Pittsburgh to gain first place, but they might possibly have to sweep four games to remain ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals who are still only a half game out of second place.

Cincinnati boxed before the Giants Tuesday. Pittsburgh slipped a game by losing to Brooklyn, 3 to 0. Art Nehf, veteran southpaw, pitched his first full game for the Chicago Cubs and returned with a 6-0 win over Boston. The St. Louis Cards made it three straight over Philadelphia, 12 to 5. Washington and Cleveland hooked up in the only game on the American League schedule. The Senators won, 4-1.

not, Jennings said it, and now the brand must sell fifty reason tickets for Connie.

LEGAL SKIRMISHES BOTH SCRAPPERS IN TITLE BATTLE

Shadows of Injunction Suits Hang Over Boxers; Referee Debate Still on

Chicago — (AP) — Odds and ends of legal skirmishes on the battle of Soldier Field Tuesday occupied the legal staffs of the leading characters in this forthcoming drama, while their boxing impresarios discussed with the state athletic commission the vital questions of referee, judges and rules of the ring.

Shadows of injunction suits in both state and federal courts were not taken seriously. One of these, E. E. Clemente's action to hold Jack Dempsey to the letter of an alleged contract to meet Harry Wills, has already been turned down once, in one state court. The other, a Federal court injunction plea by the Rev. Elmer L. Williams, well known reformer, was even more lightly regarded by Tex Rickard and his assistants.

Manager Bill Gibson, piloting champion Gene Tunney, and Manager Leo P. Flynn, directing Jack Dempsey's comeback campaign, were to meet with the three members of the boxing commission in their regular weekly get together Tuesday with five names, possibly more, up for discussion as candidates for the third man in the ring. The names of the referee and the judges will be kept secret until the moment when Chicago's first heavyweight spectacle actually begins Thursday night.

Rickard said he would take no part in the debate upon the referee. George Lytton, wealthy Chicago business man, Walter Eckersall, football star of 20 years ago and now a sports writer, and three or four of the leading referees of Chicago bouts in the past 16 years, are in this state were the principal candidates mentioned. Tunney and Dempsey did no training other than light bag thwacking and a bit of road work Tuesday while their managers were in the city, conferring with the boxing solons.

DEMPEY FAVORITE
Coincident with the arrival Tuesday of the vanguard of the ring-side press, came an influx of "New York money" and other offers of not so wise, but equally negotiable money from the south, west and north, which put the odds of the battle in favor of Dempsey. The champion had been a 7 to 5 favorite up to Monday night when the supporters of the challenger began to unstrap their bank rolls. A record in gate receipts, even though the $4,000,000 crowd in the United States were among the 32 qualified for the first round of match play in the National Womens' Golf championship.

Five strokes under woman's par and four over mens par for the Cherry Valley course, Miss Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, Canadian champion, won the qualifying medal with 77, leading a field of 140 odd competitors many of whom withdrew because of poor performances in a drizzling rain. Miss Mackenzie tied the record made by Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser at St. Louis two years ago.

In a tie for second place were Miss Maureen Orcutt, the Metropolitan champion, and Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn of Kansas City, Mo., each having 78. Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa, was next with 82. Mrs. Henry Pressler of Los Angeles, and Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, had 83.

Miss Simone Thion De La Chaume, French and British champion had 87, and Miss Eileen Pattison, champion of Bermuda, took 88.

Miss DeLauchume shared her 87 with Miss Dorothy Brown Page of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. E. H. Fitter of Philadelphia. Miss Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis., went around in 90.

JOHNSON PITCHES BREWS TO VICTORY

Milwaukee Beats Millers Easily, 12-4, but Blues Also Triumph

Milwaukee — Hank Johnson lifted the beleaguered Brewers from the evil environment which has beset the team on all sides for four days with a simple 12 to 4 victory over Minneapolis in the series opener Monday. Blues and considerable more trouble with the Saints but won and the league leadership is still a dead heat. Toledo is trailing both by a game and one-half.

Somewhere between dusk Sunday and midday Monday the Lels recovered the last batting eye of the Kayser series and pounded the Sox. The former Wilson brace of southpaw, George and Ed, combined for 17 hits, 10 runs, 10 hits and 10 runs. That's an average of two per wallop, the list including six doubles, four triples and one home run.

George Gerken was the author of the fourthly knock. Bob McMenemy bagged a pair of three baggers and a single, while Harry Rendon and King Lear scraped unto themselves three safeties apiece of various sizes and dimensions. A mere single was something to be scoffed at, and mentioned just casually in the clubhouse.

ENTRIES FOR NATIONAL PRO MEET IN SEPT. 25

New York — (AP)—Entries for the national championship of the Professional Golfers' Association must be made on or before Sept. 25. Many of the pros have already forwarded their bids. The championship will be played over the course of the Cedar Creek Country Club at Dallas, Tex. Oct. 31 to Nov. 5.

There are 24 sectional bodies identified with the national organization. In determining the number of qualifiers the ratio has been fixed as one in 25. In order to earn the right to start in the main tournament all but Walter Hagen, who has won the title three times in succession, must qualify. There will be 62 pros eligible to enter the preliminary medal play stage at Dallas after the qualifying process throughout the country has been completed. At Dallas the field will be reduced to 32 for match play.

TWO WISCONSIN GIRLS QUALIFY IN GOLF MEET

Garden City, N. Y. — (AP) — Another foreign drive for an American sporting title was in progress Tuesday. Two of the ranking competitors from outside the United States were among the 32 qualified for the first round of match play in the National Womens' Golf championship.

KIMBERLY TIES FOR THIRD IN INTER-CO

Villagers Win Final Battle from Oneida, 16-10; May Play Off Tie

Kimberly—Kimberly's team of the Inter-county League stepped up into a double tie with De Pere and Wrightstown for second place, by topping Oneida, 16-10, Sunday at the local ballpark. The games Sunday were to have been the last of the season, but according to rumors the second place triple tie may be played off next Sunday.

Hopkins' homer in the fourth was a feature of the game. Oneida was leading 8-2, when Hopkins sent the pill on a flight over the left field wall with a man on second.

After that inning, Kimberly held the lead throughout by a safe margin. Kimberly piled up a total of 19 hits to 10 for Oneida. Verbeten clouted out three doubles and a single and scored four times. Pocan spanked out a triple and two doubles and registered three times; an Gossens, Hopkins and Wellhouse had two hits apiece. Hopkins also brought in four runs. Summers had three safeties for Oneida.

The batteries were Pocan and Wellhouse for Kimberly, and Swamp and Summers for Oneida.

Seven members of the local team have averages over the three hundred mark. Du Chane leads the team with a .500 mark. Pocan with a .400 average is second highest. The other five have the following averages:
Ritten, .348; Koll, .340; Verbeten, .338; Vander Velden, .325; and Gossens, .300.

SOUTH EXPECTS TO HAVE STAR QUARTER

Vanderbilt or S. M. U. May Produce All-American Signal Caller

For All-America quarterback this year—Spears or Man of the sunny south for Billy Spears, Vanderbilt quarterback, and Gerald Mann, S. M. U. star.

And why not? Picks last year for All-America quarterback honors reveal that Benny Friedman, Michigan, who is now out of the collegiate circle of pigskin chasers, was trailed out over so many picks by one and often both of these young men.

Spears is the outstanding quarterback of the Southern Conference. Mann is the greatest quarterback developed in the southwest in many, many years.

The Vanderbilt player is an attack in himself. He's fast, very shifty, a good stocky line plunger, although he seldom bucks a line, and a gifted passer and punter.

Mann boasts of exceptional ability in the same departments. Both will play with strong teams this year, teams likely to win the championship of their respective sections.

They will take a great quarterback to dislodge these two young men from All-America honors.

BADGER TRACK CARD
A copy of the Wisconsin track schedule hit this department a day or so ago. And what a schedule! The Badgers are listed for just about every relay to take place next year—the Illinois ones at Illinois, Ohio, Kansas, Drake and Penn. They are also set for dual meets against Iowa, Notre Dame, Minnesota and Northwestern, as well as an indoor conference meet at Evanston, two quadrangular meets, the Big Ten and the N. C. 4-A meets.

Baltimore — Joe Ryder, Brooklyn, defeated Nate Carp, Baltimore (10)

Every Child Deserves This Priceless Opportunity

The ability to play the piano is a social asset of first importance—and an unfailing source of happiness throughout all life. Every child deserves the privilege of a piano education.

Walter Damrosch, one of the foremost figures in American music and for forty-two years conductor of the New York Symphony, says:—

"Every child in our country should learn to sing, and how to play at least upon one musical instrument. Among these the piano is perhaps the most practical for musical cultural purposes. Nothing should crowd out the opportunity for self-expression which can come to those who can play the piano with some degree of mastery."

Today, new methods in teaching have made lessons simpler and more enjoyable at lower cost than ever before. The piano itself is available in a far greater range of styles and sizes than ever before. In our showrooms there are pianos to fit every size of room and pocketbook. Come in today and let us show you how you can have this real necessity, the piano, placed in your home immediately.

JACK LOCKWILL AT SUMMER CAMP

"That's dirty stuff!" cried a shrill voice. To the bully's surprise, Peewee Lockwill rushed up and stood looking at him with contempt, and hatred in his faded blue eyes. "A fellow that'll sock his best friend is a rotter!" said Peewee. "Oh, is that so, you little snipe?" snarled Saunders, seizing Lannan and wringing his arms. "Take it back or I'll twist your wing off!"

"Oh—oh, don't!" squawked Peewee, writhing in distress. "You're breaking my arm!" "I'll turn it out of the socket, you miserable runt!" threatened the ruffian.

Lockwill, having dressed after a rub-down, heard Peewee's yelps of pain as he came out of the gymnasium tent. The sounds took him to the scene in haste. Usually cool-headed and self-controlled, Jack's wrath mastered him when he saw what Saunders was doing. For a second time, he hit Buke and knocked him cold. Then he carried him on to the float and threw him overboard.

TOWNSLITTLE WORK FOR
H. S. STUDENTS IN NEW LONDON HOMES

Many Willing to Work but Find Small Demand for Their Services

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Many high school students are willing to work, but there is no work for them to do. This was the recent statement of R. J. McMahon, superintendent of public school. Boys and girls of the local high school who have registered at the school offices as being willing to work for board and room and a little pocket money, said Mr. McMahon. They are anxious to do anything, but thus far there have been but few demands for student help.

There are girls who are willing to care for children, to help with cleaning, wash dishes or aid with the housework on Saturday. Boys will tend furnaces, mow lawns or shovel walks for the school room and board and a little pocket money. But New London men tend their own furnaces and shovel their own walks, it would seem, and New London women are too independent to feel the need of girls.

One business man, when asked why he did not employ the services of a school boy, stated that he needed the exercise of the work he had to do, to keep him in condition, and a woman, asked the same question, replied that the independent nature of not having an outsider in one's home more than balances the hardship of doing the extra housework and dishes.

GRID SEASON WILL BE STARTED OCT. 8

New London Squad Will Meet
Clintonville Eleven at That City for Opening Game

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—New London's first football game of the season will be played on Oct. 8, according to the schedule issued by R. J. McMahon, of the local high school. Sept. 24 and Oct. 1, still remain open dates, but efforts are being made to date some school as soon as possible. The first game will be played with Clintonville high school, at Clintonville field, and the first game on the home field will be with West De Pere here on Oct. 15. This home game will be followed by two others, one on Oct. 22, with Menasha, and the return home game with Clintonville on Oct. 29. What will probably be the last game of the season will be played on Nov. 11, when New London will play East De Pere at East De Pere.

The question of scouting has come up for national dispute between universities and colleges, and according to Mr. McMahon, it never can be stopped. Scouting, he declared, has always gone on and always will, and the first and most sportsmanlike way is the open way most recently adopted. Teams will always send out scouts to learn, if they can, the opponents' weaknesses and manner of play. Open scouting is best, giving the coaches all the opportunity to change the tactics of the team if they desire to do so.

REPAIR FLAWS IN LIGHTING SYSTEM

Crew of Men Inspects Wiring and Finds Several Defective Groundings

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Lack of light in the downtown district soon will be avoided, was promised on Monday by Ray Thomas, superintendent of the light and power plant. Mr. Thomas and a crew of men have been working for nearly a week on the underground wiring system of the city in an effort to locate the trouble which caused all of the street lights to go out. Defective ground wires were found at various points of the city. One bad connection was found at the Grand hotel, another at the Kozy Korner tea room and others at Vadhams and the Deep Rock filling stations. Mr. Thomas stated that defects of this nature are prevalent wherever the same system of lighting is used. Four circuits were found in bad condition which affected only downtown street lights and not the lines connecting residences or business houses.

During several nights of last week there were no lights, save those of business houses on down town streets. By Sunday night this trouble had been cleared up considerably and before the middle of the week all lights will be in commission again, it was stated.

Little city work is being done at the present time, Mr. Thomas stated, beyond the repairing of sewerage systems. A new sewerage line is being laid at the Zaug residence, Wyman-st. A leak was recently found in the water main at the west end of Wolf river-ave., and has been repaired by the city's crew.

Two Parties to Accident Sue Each Other in Municipal Court Here

A civil suit in which Mrs. Elsie Kappel, 1444 W. Rogers-ave seeks $2,500 damages from Herman Sprangers, Darboy, was started in the upper branch of municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg Monday and was expected to go to the jury Tuesday afternoon. The suit grew out of an automobile accident which occurred on Oct. 6, 1926 on the Darboy-rd near the Blazing Stump roadhouse.

Mrs. Kappel in her complaint alleges she was traveling west toward Appleton with her 6-year-old daughter and Mrs. Margaret Stoffel, 820 N. State-st, when Sprangers, traveling at a high rate of speed on the left side of the road crashed into them. She claims she was in the hospital for some time as a result of internal injuries received in the crash. She asks $2,500 damages for her own injuries and the damage to her automobile.

In his answer the defendant denies all the allegations and declares he was traveling at a proper rate of speed but that Mrs. Kappel was driving without proper lights and at an excessive rate of speed and that the entire accident was her fault.

He alleges that as a result of her careless and negligent driving he suffered personal injuries to the extent of $2,000 and his car was damaged to the extent of $200. He asks the court to disallow her claim and give him a judgment for the amount of damages claimed.

Steffen, who was to be a witness in the case of Kappel versus Sprangers, apparently was intoxicated when called to take the witness stand and he staggered about the courtroom and was unable to find the witness chair. The judge ordered him placed in jail. He made no effort to resist the officers until he saw the bars looming before his blurred gaze and he struck out with his fist, narrowly missing the bailiff's head and he kicked Scherck who answered the kick with a straight "dumpey" right to the jaw, which completely cowed Steffen and he offered no further resistance.

DARBOY MAN NURSES SORE JAW IN JAIL

Witness in Lawsuit Takes Fast Right from Scherck When He Shows Fight

John Steffen, Darboy, is in the county jail nursing a bruised jaw as a result of a struggle with Walter Scherck, deputy sheriff, and Dennis Carroll, court bailiff, Tuesday morning, when he was ordered out of the courtroom by Judge Theodore Berg. He was to be arraigned Tuesday afternoon on a charge of drunkenness and probably with contempt of court.

Steffen, who was to be a witness in the case of Kappel versus Sprangers, apparently was intoxicated when called to take the witness stand and he staggered about the courtroom and was unable to find the witness chair. The judge ordered him placed in jail. He made no effort to resist the officers until he saw the bars looming before his blurred gaze and he struck out with his fist, narrowly missing the bailiff's head and he kicked Scherck who answered the kick with a straight "dumpey" right to the jaw, which completely cowed Steffen and he offered no further resistance.

STOCK PRICES AGAIN IN UPWARD MOVEMENT

Rise in Renewal Rate for Call Loans Only Disturbing Factor to Bulls

New York — Rising prices were again in force at the opening of the stock market Tuesday. With some wide changes a standing list of Texas Gulf Sulphur began the day at $9, a new top up 2 1/2 points, while Calumet and Arizona, Colorado Fuel, General Railway Signal and Western Maryland were among the issues which showed overnight gains of a point or more.

Rapid expansion of buying in the first half hour indicated that traders believed the impaired technical condition responsible for Monday's break had largely been corrected. Such leaders as General Motors, old and new stocks, U. S. Steel, Dupont and International Harvester moved up briskly with gains ranging from one to three points. Rails were comparatively quiet. An overnight jump of 3 1/2 points in Spanish pesetas to 17.40 cents was the feature of the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling was quoted unchanged around 4.86-4.87 and French francs slightly higher above 3.25 cents.

Some constructive interests were apparently unperturbed by the further marking up of the renewal rate for call loans to 4 per cent, as many of the best prices of the morning were maintained. The charge with standing loans had been fixed. Nevertheless, the incident appeared to have little effect on the market. The closing was strong. Total sales approximated 2,250,000 shares.

ADVANCEMENT OF HEALTH PROGRAM TOLD AT MEETING

Doctors and Health Officers
Holding Two Day Session at Eau Claire

Eau Claire.—(P)—The two-day meeting of the eighth biennial conference of health officers, held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the state medical society, opened here Tuesday morning with an address by Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer, now in the twenty-third year of his service.

Dr. Harper traced the history of public health work in the state for the past 50 years. He pointed out that the Wisconsin state board of health has had only three executive secretaries in 50 years; Dr. J. T. Reed of Appleton, Dr. U. C. B. Wineteer of Milwaukee and himself. He recalled the uncertainty and indefinite procedure with which health officers performed their functions in the early days.

"Quarantine was then unknown," he said. Diphtheria and scarlet fever were often designated as sore throat. There were no public health laboratories. Deaths from typhoid fever in Wisconsin have been reduced 95 per cent since 1905; meningitis shows a reduction of 73 per cent; measles, 47 per cent; diphtheria, 58 per cent; while infant mortality has declined 46 per cent.

CAN PREDICT BIRTHS

L. W. Hutchcroft, assistant state health officer, in speaking on vital statistics, warned against an undue sense of security from the showing made in the extension of the years of life. Mr. Hutchcroft said that the health officer who is familiar with the vital statistics for a ten year period can prophesy within reasonable limits the number of births and the cases of communicable disease in his district.

Dr. H. M. Guilford, director of the bureau of communicable diseases, discussed the conquest of diphtheria. "In 1891," he said, "Wisconsin had 2,202 deaths from diphtheria. In all the years up to the discovery of the antitoxin in 1894, there was a high prevalence of the disease, with the mortality reaching to 20 and 30 per cent of the cases reported. The diphtheria mortality has now fallen to 7 or 8 per cent of the cases reported in the state."

Dr. G. W. Henika, Madison, deputy state health officer for the first sanitary district, discussed the control of rabies, describing it as equivalent to the control of the dog population. He said that rabies exists practically the world over except in England, Australia, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, where proper use of the dog muzzle and destruction of stray and ownerless dogs have eliminated the disease. He pointed out that while Wisconsin has no state law regulating the muzzling of dogs, local authorities have power to adopt such measures.

USE CLEAN WATER

C. M. Baker, state sanitary engineer, spoke of the state's efforts to prevent disease through public water supplies. He cautioned continual vigilance to assure safe water supplies, calling attention to the fact that an analysis of water indicates only its condition at the time the samples were collected.

The sanitation of rural homes was discussed by Frank R. King, domestic

SENATOR EULOGIZES FRANCE TO LEGION

Declares She Carried Torch of Liberty Highest and Farthest in Europe

Paris.—(P)—The French nation was eulogized before the American Legion convention Tuesday by Senator Davis Tyson of Tennessee as having carried "highest, longest and farthest" in Europe "the torch of liberty and freedom and equality for all mankind."

Senator Tyson, himself a veteran of the world war, acknowledged "as a senator, an American Expeditionary Force," the United States' eternal devotion and gratitude to France for all she did for the United States in the Revolutionary war of 1776.

"We are here," he said, as ambassadors of good will and love and peace to the people of France, and to express our undying devotion to their interest and our great and everlasting respect and admiration for them as citizens, as soldiers and as comrades in war. We represent the feeling of America and of the soldiers of the world war toward the chivalric and splendid people of this great republic."

"We come to tell the people of France that there must be nothing but brotherhood and kindness and good will between these two nations who have done so much for each other."

Wisconsin's program for reducing infant and maternal mortality was the subject of a talk by Dr. Cora S. Allen, director of the bureau of child welfare. "The work of the child welfare bureau," she said, "is to stress prenatal care for every prospective mother, it having been found by the census bureau that for every 1,000 children born, six mothers lost their lives from conditions incident to childbirth. Standards for prenatal care have been drawn up by our government, and are distributed to local physicians."

Miss Cornelia Van Kooy, director of public health nursing spoke briefly on the various phases of her work. The day's program closed with a talk by Miss Aimee Zillmer, lecturer in social hygiene education.

SINGER TO APPEAR IN CONCERT HERE HAS NATIONAL FAME

Miss Marion Talley Made Her
Debut Before Immense
Audience in New York

No singer in modern times has secured the attention of the country accorded to Marion Talley, youthful prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., whose first concert here at Lawrence Memorial chapel, Friday evening, Oct. 7, will be a feature of the musical season. Miss Talley will come as the first number on the Community Artist series sponsored by Lawrence conservatory of music.

Amid scenes of indescribable enthusiasm this Kansas City girl, the youngest ever to step on the stage at the Metropolitan opera house in New York City, made her debut as Gilda, in "Rigoletto," in Feb. 1925. The house was packed to the doors with so great a crowd without that it had to be dispersed by mounted police.

The phenomenon of a young girl who never had performed on a stage and indeed had sung only a few times with an orchestra, to make her debut at the world's greatest opera house in a leading role and meet the exacting tasks imposed by the standards of this house, is considered by many the most remarkable feat in musical history. Miss Talley's triumph is spoken of by comparison only with Jenny Lind and Adeline Patti.

IS UNUSUAL FETE

The unspooled youth of this artist, her girlish beauty, the appealing freshness of her voice and the remarkable romance of her climb at so youthful an age to the highest pinnacle, and to say that we must live in peace and amity with each other, and in mutual respect, esteem and helpfulness, until the end of time."

ole of art is regarded as one of the extraordinary triumphs of American pluck and perseverance.

Since that memorable night Miss Talley has steadily progressed in voice and art. At the Metropolitan Opera house she has sung in two seasons, 50 performances of leading roles. In the period since her debut over 100 concerts in cities throughout America have been sung by the young soprano to capacity houses.

Other numbers on the Community Artist series this season will be Louis Graveure, famous baritone, Dec. 7; Pablo Casals, the great Spanish cellist, Jan. 23; Walter Gieseking, noted interpretative pianist, Feb. 9; and the English Singers of London, unique and popular concert singers, March 16.

Season tickets for the series are on sale at Lawrence conservatory.

Crowd them a little and most of the cars that you're likely to buy will give you more speed than you're likely to need.

But you never need to crowd a Wolverine. It does its job easily, smoothly, willingly. Try one yourself and see the way it goes through its paces. Watch how quickly it gathers speed—no straining, no rumbling, no laboring. Hold it at forty or fifty for awhile—that will tell you how easily it will carry you fast hour after hour, mile after mile.

Push it a little faster than you think you dare over a road that's half holes and half bumps—you'll know then what comfort means to the owner of a Wolverine.

If you like a car that's so quick to respond to your every wish, that you can forget the car in the joy of going—you'll find the Wolverine is the kind of car you'll like to own.
